April 2017

Peanuts, Cracker Jack, & Baseball!

From the first pitch of spring training to the last out of the World Series 2017, baseball fans will bite their nails or tee-ter on the edge of their seats for an amazing double play or a down-the-third-baseline bunt. Fans will also focus on last year's World Series winning team to debate if a repeat can happen or will the Cubs have to wait another 108 years for a season winner. With the play-by-play on the radio or on the screen, fans can also nab a baseball book at the Dunklin County Library to enrich their fan experience or knowledge.

With one of the most distinctive voices in all of sports, Jack Buck began radio broadcasting Cardinal games in 1954. "Remembering Jack Buck" by Rich Wolfe contains wonderful stories celebrating this legend who could repeatedly share "That's a winner, folks!" at the end of a Redbird game. With almost five decades as an announcer, Buck saw the Cardinals through "Whitey Ball" and the chase for Maris' home-run record.

Buzz Bissinger takes the reader into the head of one of the winningest managers in baseball. Tony LaRussa, who has a law degree, shares poignantly how his dedication to his career affected his marriage and his kids and when to encourage, punish, or reward players. "Three Nights in August" also sheds light on Matheny's hiring as the next Cardinal skipper.

Bob Forsch's "Tales from the St. Louis Cardinals Dugout" takes fans into the clubhouse, out to the bullpen, onto the mound, up to the batter's box, around the base paths, along for the ride to spring training, and even on a fishing trip or two in this tribute to the long and storied tradition of St. Louis Cardinals baseball. He also tips his cap to Willie McGee and Jack Buck. But, his quips of Jim Kaat's tips for doctoring a baseball and clubhouse pranks on superstitious Juaquin Andujar make this book an engaging read for Cardinal fans.

All of these books and many more baseball books can be checked out at the Dunklin County Library.

David Baldacci's "Memory Man" is an engaging thriller that Clarkton librarian, Margaret Pilsing, recommends repeatedly. A well-written, fast paced novel with a quirky detective and complex characters, this selection entertains the reader with several real-life strategies.

Other top suggestions from this librarian are John Grisham's "Pelican Brief" and Barbara Delinsky's "Coastal Road" because each book is high interest and simply a good story.

The Librarian's Lead

Margaret enjoys working in the Clarkton community. She believes books are a friend. Caring for books and sharing these friends with library patrons makes her happy. Monthly themes and book arrangement are two goals of this branch librarian.

Margaret wishes for increased library traffic and book circulation. Children will find the Clarkton library a welcome, enriching place.

The Clarkton branch is open Monday through Friday afternoon from 1 pm to 5 pm.

In 1994 baseball aficionados were delighted to see in book stores, and libraries, a book written by acclaimed writer, David Halberstam. The book was entitled, "October 1964."

Baseball was in a transitional period in 1964: Youngsters were moving out of the sandlots into the more organized game controlled by adults. The kids still used sewing machine oil to loosen the leather in their gloves; so when the ball hit the mitt, it stung, but stuck; that familiar oil scent, the crack of the bat, and dusty afternoons provided a lasting memory of the great game. An even more serious transition was that long excluded black players were now entering the majors.

In 1964 the New York Yankees were king of the hill. Their American League and World Series domination was so strong it created a love/hate fan base. Broadway took advantage of this by producing a musical called "Damn Yankees," which comically presented the fact that it would take the Devil himself to stop the Yankees.

This baseball selection and numerous others are available at the Dunklin County Library.

Great as they were, however, the Yankees were aging. They were also very slow in signing the black players where the National League had a head start. Meanwhile, the St. Louis Cardinals, after an 18 year drought in winning the World Series-were building a youth program based on speed & balance and complimented by veterans who knew how to win. They also had acquired some outstanding black players:

Practically stealing Lou Brock from the Cubs, they had also signed Curt Flood, Bill White, and the indomitable, Bob Gibson.

In "October 1964", David Halberstam writes about one of the most exciting National League pennant races in baseball history in which the Cardinals win on the absolute last game of the regular season. This advances them to the World Series against the highly favored Yankees, "Bronx Bombers."

Halberstam wrote about this period in a dazzling fast-paced style that segues so effortlessly it becomes difficult to find a stopping place. What a book to start the upcoming season with, when umpires all over the country will be shouting: "Play Ball!!!!"
